PREFACE.

The collection of some eight thousand catalogues of English book sales here listed ranges from the sale of the library of Dr. Lazarus Seaman on 31 October, 1676, the first occasion when books were sold by auction in England, to the end of the nineteenth century. It owes its importance mainly to the long sets of the auctioneers' own copies, carrying on interleaves the prices and purchasers' names for every lot, and the totals of each sale, of various well-known firms. The longest of these sets is that of the firm which began as S. Baker, over Exeter Change, Strand, in the first half of the eighteenth century, and now flourishes under the style of Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge. This runs from 7 January, 1744, to the end of our period. Other priced sets are those of Evans (1812–1845), Southgate (1825–1868), Lewis (1825–1852), Wheatley (1825–1837), and Puttick (1846–1888).

In addition to these special sets the Museum is fairly rich in the earlier catalogues and in those of other firms, though few of these are priced, and fewer still give the purchasers' names. For some twenty years in the middle of the eighteenth century the collection is very weak, but, taken as a whole, it offers to the student of the history of book-collecting an unrivalled mass of material. Partly to preserve this historical interest, but mainly because of the large number of early anonymous sales, and for greater economy in printing, the order of the List itself is chronological, with a full Index of Owners, with the dates of their sales.

The greater number of the Sale-Catalogues here listed had never been entered in the General Catalogue of the Department of Printed Books, and were made available for use by means of a rough hand-list on cards. Others appeared in the old manuscript catalogue of the Department of Printed Books, under one of six subdivisions of an unwieldy heading, CATALOGUES, which was much curtailed when it came to be printed. They are now all brought together in this Special List, which, it is hoped, will be found convenient to handle by those interested in them, while the General Catalogue is relieved of a burdensome addition.

The compilation of the list was begun, in the intervals of more pressing work, by Mr. Harold Mattingly, then an Assistant in the Department of Printed Books, and on his transference to the Department of Coins and Medals was continued by Mr. I. A. K. Burnett. On the outbreak of war in August, 1914, Mr. Burnett, and also Mr. Mattingly, volunteered for military service. The preparation and indexing of the List were then far advanced, and the work was taken up and seen through the press by Mr. A. W. Pollard, Assistant Keeper of Printed Books, who had previously to some extent supervised it.

INTRODUCTION.

The earliest book auction of which record survives is said to be that of the library of Philip van Marnix on 6 July, 1599. It took a little more than three-quarters of a century for this method of selling books to be adopted in England, and there is clear evidence that it was at the suggestion of an English Presbyterian minister ordinarily domiciled in Holland that the first English book sale was held. The Presbyterian minister was Dr. Joseph Hill, who, after his career at Cambridge had been cut short by the Act of Uniformity in 1662, transferred himself to Leyden, and later on became pastor of the Scottish Church at Middelburg, in Zeeland. The publication in 1673 of a pamphlet defending the tortuous policy of Charles II. led to Hill being ordered to leave Zeeland till the war with France was over. Until 1678, when he accepted a call to Rotterdam, Hill was in England, and it was about the middle of his stay here that there died "the Reverend and Learned Divine, Dr. Lazarus Seaman, sometime Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, Master of Peterhouse, and late Minister of the Gospel in All-Hallows, Bread Street" (the recital of his titles is taken from a contemporary elegy), whose library was the first in England to "come under the hammer," on 31 October, 1676. That it was Hill who advised that the library should be sold in this way we know from a letter written to him 25 June, 1697, now preserved as Stowe MS. 709 in the British Museum, with an early endorsement, "Mr. Millington, the noted auctioneer, to Mr. Jos. Hill." The final cause of this letter was apparently a desire to interest the recipient in the forthcoming sale of part of the library of Dr. Edward Bernard, over which Millington presided at Oxford in the following October. Reserving mention of this, however, for a later paragraph, he addresses Hill with a warm expression of thanks "for your great Service done to Learning and Learned Men in your first advising and effectually setting on foot that admirable and universally approved of way of selling Librarys by Auction amongst us," and if this outburst of gratitude, over twenty years after the event, was not entirely disinterested, there seems no reason whatever to doubt the information which it conveys.

The auction was preceded by the publication of a catalogue dignified by a Latin titlepage, reading :—

Catalogus Variorum & Insignium Librorum Instructissimæ Bibliothecæ Clarissimi Doctissimiq; Viri Lazari Seaman, S.T.D., Quorum Auctio habebitur Londini in ædibus Defuncti in Area & Viculo Warwicensi, Octobris ultimo. Cura Gulielmi Cooper Bibliopolæ.

As a Preface to it we find the following Address :—

TO THE READER.

READER,

It hath not been usual here in England to make Sales of BOOKS by way of Auction, or who will give most for them : But it having been practised in other Countreys to the Advantage both of Buyers and Sellers ; It was therefore conceived (for the Encouragement of Learning) to publish the Sale of these Books this manner of way ; and it is hoped that this will not be unacceptable to Schollers ; and therefore we thought it convenient to give an Advertisement concerning the manner of proceeding therein.

First, That having this Catalogue of the Books, and their Editions under their several Heads and Numbers, it will be more easie for any Person of Quality, Gentlemen, or others, to Depute any one to Buy such Books for them as they shall desire, if their occasions will not permit them to be present at the Auction themselves.

Secondly, That those which bid most are the Buyers ; and if any manifest Differences should arise, that then the same Book or Books shall be forthwith exposed again to Sale, and the highest bidder to have the same.

Thirdly, That all the Books according to the Catalogue are (for so much as we know) perfect, and sold as such ; But if any of them appear to be otherwise before they be taken away, the Buyer shall have his choice of taking or leaving the same.

Fourthly, That the Mony for the Books bought, be paid at the Delivery of them, within one Month's time after the Auction is ended.

Fifthly, That the Auction will begin the 31st of October at the Deceased Drs House in Warwick Court in Warwick lane punctually at Nine of the Clock in the Morning, and Two in the Afternoon, and this to continue daily until all the Books be Sold. Wherefore it is desired, that the Gentlemen, or those Deputed by them, may be there precisely at the Hours appointed, lest they should miss the opportunity of Buying those Books, which either themselves or their Friends desire.

The priced copies of the catalogue which have come down to us show that the five or six thousand volumes which formed Dr. Seaman's library sold very fairly well, and there is ample evidence, though much of it is derived from prefaces to subsequent sale-catalogues, that the new method of selling books was à distinct success. The most decisive proof of this is the fact that in the summer of 1686, when it had been in use for ten years, William Cooper, who had presided at Dr. Seaman's sale, was able to print a list of no fewer than seventy-four auctions which had been held, in London or the provinces, mostly by himself or Millington. Of the catalogues of these seventy-four sales, copies of all but five are entered in the present list, the missing ones being :—

12. M. Jon. Edwin, Bibl. cum Append. D. Dan } Mar. 29, 1680.
19. D. Th. Jessop D. Castel } Feb. 21. 168$\frac{0}{1}$.
22. Pet. Cardonell, June 6, 1681.
28. Robert Croke, Esq. Feb. 23, 168$\frac{1}{2}$.
64. A Catalogue of Civil Law Books, being but half a sheet. Feb. 25, 168$\frac{5}{6}$.

From the collector's standpoint, the most interesting of these early sales was that, on 15 May, 1682, of Richard Smith, the "Secondary of the Poultry Compter" (an office equivalent to that of under-sheriff and worth £700 a year), who had acquired and enlarged the collections of Humphrey Dyson, one of the earliest of "printed-book" men, and left behind him as many as eleven Caxtons, which, at prices ranging from 2*s.* for the Book of Good Manners, to 18*s.* 2*d.* for Godfrey of Boloyne ("being K. Edward the IV.'s own Book"), realised a total of £3 4*s.* 2*d.*

The Smith sale stands by itself; when we examine the catalogues of the other early book sales, we find that their main importance lay in the increased facilities they offered for buying and selling the learned works printed abroad on which English scholarship was still largely dependent. In the first half of the sixteenth century the demand in England for books of this class printed at Cologne, Basel and Paris, was sufficiently great for foreign book-agents to establish themselves in London in order to supply it. With the publication of editions like the Eton Chrysostom and Walton's Polyglott Bible, England was now a producer as well as a purchaser, and the premature challenge in the Oxford Phalaris of 1485,

> "Celatos Veneti nobis transmittere libros > Cedite: nos aliis vendimus, O Veneti,"

was a little better justified. But the need of foreign editions, as well as of the representative works of foreign literature, was still great; and English book-agents visited the Frankfort book fair and traversed the Continent to supply their customers, not with the typographical curiosities or books valued for their rarity for which we find search being made in the eighteenth century, but for works which were wanted for study. Much of this searching had been done by private arrangement with wealthy buyers, but it had already led to the publication of catalogues, of which the British Museum possesses a few. Thus, in 1639, Robert Martin, whose premises were "in Old Bayly," issued a "Catalogus librorum ex præcipuis Italiæ emporiis selectorum" (122. g. 22/1); in 1655 the library of Joannes Riolanus, a Paris physician, was offered for sale by John Martin and James Allestrye at the Sign of the Bell in St. Paul's Churchyard (S.-C. 842); in 1657 Octavian Pulleyn put forth a "Catalogus librorum in omni genere insignium" to be sold "at the sign of the Rose," also in St. Paul's Churchyard (S.-C. 922*/6), and in 1674, two years before the Seaman sale, Robert Scott, of Little Britain, issued a "Catalogus librorum ex variis Europæ partibus advectorum" (821. i. 13/5). These catalogues are not priced, their setters-forth preferring apparently to have a look at their customer, possibly also at the state of their own till, before deciding how much to ask.

As we have noted, while the new method of selling books by auction, "or who will give most for them," speedily established itself, definite praises of it come mostly from the prefaces of the auctioneers. The same prefaces, however, allow us to see that some serious difficulties speedily arose. As early as the third a hope is expressed

"of receiving such Encouragement from the Learned as may prevent the stifling of this manner of Sale," and in the fifth the auctioneers (Dunmore and Chiswell) refer to a report "that we intend to use indirect means to advance the Prices." Stigmatising this as "a groundless and malicious suggestion of some of our own Trade, envious of our Vndertaking," they yet meet the attack by the notice that "we have absolutely refused all manner of Commissions that have been offered us for buying." There can be no doubt that the ordinary booksellers had some reason for the hostility with which they are here credited. The private library must hitherto have been their easy prey, and these auctions, in which, according to the preface, "the Benefit (if rightly considered)" was "equally balanced between Buyer and Seller," were a threatening innovation. Before the first decade was over, however, we find several booksellers testing the efficacy of selling by auction as a means of turning their stocks into cash, and apparently the experiment was regarded as successful, as the trade sales quickly increased till, for a time, they far outnumbered those of private libraries. The mysteries of these trade sales soon become baffling. It seems clear that alongside of what may be called a commission business, in which libraries were sold by order of the owners, there was also a considerable speculative business in which the auctioneer himself collected, from home or abroad, the stocks of books which he offered for sale. On the other hand, we find quite early a tendency on the part of booksellers who did not actually take to the "rostrum" to give to the catalogues which they continued to issue some resemblance to those of the now popular book auctions, by announcing that they would begin on a certain day. We find George Thomason selling the library of the Rev. Dr. Hawkins in this way in April, 1685, and C. Bateman, of the Bible and Crown, Holborn, sold several collections thus somewhere about 1695.* These sales more nearly resembled those of a modern draper than genuine auctions, but inasmuch as their number rapidly increased, and they frequently dealt with all or part of the books of important private owners, from Archbishops of Canterbury downwards, they are both interesting in themselves and an essential feature in any history of book-collecting.

* The catalogue of the sale announced for Tuesday the 24th of an unspecified month or year probably is closer to this date than to 1686, under which it is conjecturally entered.

In or about 1732 the further step was taken of printing the prices at which the books were to be bought. It may be noted that on 27 January of that year John Darby, of Bartholomew Close, issued an unpriced catalogue of the books which he was prepared to sell very cheaply on quitting business, and on 7 February reissued it with the prices affixed. The catalogue was quite an unimportant one, and it is very improbable that it set a new fashion in the trade. It is more likely that the quick adoption of the practice was due to the success of some more important sale not represented in the Museum collection, which, except for its long sets of auctioneers' copies of their own catalogues, has grown up very promiscuously. In any case, from about 1732 the dealer's catalogue with fixed printed prices (noted in our entries by the letters "P. F. P.") gradually supersedes those which left the disclosure of the fixed prices * to be made verbally by the dealer, or ascertained from a note written in the beginning of the book. As late as the end of the eighteenth century we trace the influence of the genuine auction in the addition to ordinary dealers' catalogues of such words as "This day," "Now selling," etc., and down to the close of that century all these catalogues are included in our list, as too intimately connected with the auction system to be omitted.

If the Museum collection were equally representative in all its sections, as to which a caution has already been given, it would be clear that in the early part of the eighteenth century dealers' sales were far more common than genuine auctions, many private collections being sold in this way, presumably after having been purchased by the bookseller en bloc. Genuine book auctions, however, always continued to be held, and those of Thomas Rawlinson were on a scale which could hardly be paralleled till the dispersal of Heber's collections. That a still greater number were not held is due to the fact that the stream of gifts and bequests of books to public institutions which began in the seventeenth century continued to run freely during the eighteenth, and thus many books were prevented from coming under the hammer.

The record of the auctions of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, though augmented by many entries of dealers' catalogues, fills less than a quarter of our list. To prevent the interest of the nineteenth century sales being depreciated by too large an admixture of anonymous trade sales of no importance, many of these have been omitted, it being easy to find them by the name of the auctioneer and date, while a printed record of them serves no purpose. All the book sales, however, belonging to the longest set in the Museum collection, that acquired periodically from Messrs. Sotheby and their predecessors, are here recorded. From this and the other sets mentioned in the Preface, information has in many cases been obtained both as to the owners of books sold anonymously, and the dates of sales incompletely dated on the titlepage. On the other hand, little or no help has been derived from this source in the difficult task of identifying or distinguishing owners bearing the same name or initials; and despite much trouble having been taken it is probable that several owners have been split into two in our List or Index, and in other cases two or more men of the same name have been treated as one. The difficulty in these questions of identification arises from the twin facts that many collectors, after a sale (possibly a sale of their "mistakes"), make a fresh start and collect again, sometimes for many years; and, on the other hand, that the heirs of collectors often keep their books intact as long as neither space nor money is needed, and then sell them. Thus, a collector holding a position in the Church, the legal profession or the Army, who could easily be supplied with his full personal names if it were certain that his sale took place immediately after his death, has often had to be left with the incomplete description conferred upon him by the auctioneer, for lack of any certainty as to his floruit.

In regard to this and other small points it cannot be hoped that the List has not suffered from the necessity which removed both its compilers to the work of national defence and left their task to be completed by another hand. For the Index, again, very valuable help was being given by a volunteer worker, Mr. Gordon Goodwin; and deprivation of this, unhappily through Mr. Goodwin's serious illness, has probably also caused a few threads to be dropped. But the List, which is only a List and not a Catalogue, offers in a compact form a conspectus of English book sales for two centuries and a quarter, and it is hoped that students, collectors and dealers will all find it useful.

ALFRED W. POLLARD.

NOTE.

The order of the entries is chronological. Catalogues of sales of which the year only is known are placed at the end of the list for that year, and those specifying the year and month, but not the day, at the end of the list for the month.

The style and address of every firm, according to the information supplied by the catalogue, is given in full the first time it occurs in the List for any year; in subsequent entries for that year (unless a change is made in it) in a shortened form, or, in the case of well-known firms, by initials only. The key to any initials used will thus always be found in an earlier entry for the same year. The letters "P. F." stand for Fixed Prices, and the letters "P. F. P." for prices fixed and printed.
